The Currency of Life (an ode to the beat of the heart)

Joey Resignato
New York Medical College

Follow this and additional works at: https://touroscholar.touro.edu/quill_and_scope

Part of the Arts and Humanities Commons, Higher Education Commons, and the Medicine and Health Sciences Commons

Recommended Citation
Resignato, J. (2017). The Currency of Life (an ode to the beat of the heart). Quill & Scope, 9 (1). Retrieved from

This Poetry and Creative Writing is brought to you for free and open access by the Students at Touro Scholar. It has been accepted for inclusion in Quill & Scope by an authorized editor of Touro Scholar. For more information, please contact touro.scholar@touro.edu.
Perspectives

The Currency of Life (an ode to the beat of the heart)

Joey Resignato

Compulsion ticks predictably so in prison chambers' depths.
Secrets still buried yet to be known, the continuing pace is kept.
Through solid bars a voice is heard;
it echoes unrefined.
Beating controlled by the nerve-tenfold...yet keeps no track of time.

Pounding resounding; demand is high! Sympathetically imposed
Strength found within controls the tides through which most matter flows.
A song and rhythm inherent within him
Pumps fuel into the fire.
But nothing more than several wires can document his prose.

Electrically heaving, twisting, resisting the oppression from up high,
Workers stand strong, repeating their song from cells where junctions lie.

Salt beads on lytes as the pumps engage, the wait from the atrial gate
Then trickles along, the word is now spread, and the prisoners know their fate.

From cell to cell, the workers fell.
Current passes by.
As secret signals spout like shingles.
Current passes by.
Strength is built coercing humor, the heart functions without fault.
And what's current is present for a moment's time before the next re-volt.